

Introduction

This notice is to inform Customers that National Waste Programme (NWP) training on how to complete LLW Repository Ltd's Waste Consignment Information (WCI) Form for Diversion Services has been revised and the updated course is now available on the Nuclear Training Network (NTN) portal.

Training on completing the WCI Form (Diversion Services)

Following changes to the LLW Repository Ltd waste services forms in 2016, NWP training on how to complete the revised WCI Form (Diversion Services) is now available.

Training on the new Waste Characterisation Form, Waste Enquiry Form and WCI Form (LLW Disposal) went live in February 2017. Training on the WCI form for supercompaction services is in development.

The method of training delivery on the forms has also changed, from e-learning modules, to the completion of downloadable workbooks. This was in response to Customer feedback and has the benefit of enabling the workbooks to be used as reference guides when Customers are completing forms for their waste.

Learners must return to the Nuclear Training Network portal to take the course on-line assessment and to receive a certificate.

How to access modules

The training modules are available free of charge via the NTN portal. If learners haven't already done so, they will need to register at <https://www.nucleartrainingnetwork.com/>; then insert 'NWP' in the search box and the new courses and all existing NWP training modules will appear.
